

MAY -4 1925

©CLM

3016

DARKEST AFRICA.

Right down in the heart of the blackest of all black countries, one can occasionally find a few white people.

But to make a long story short, we find flocks of monkeys practicing the very same "flimflams" that has made Coney Island famous.

Bozo Monk has a big telescope and is selling looks at Mars for five cents, this proves a great money getter, and satisfied every customer by hitting them on the head so they see plenty of stars.

Then we find the fat head monkey family using Jack Rhino as a means of playing a friendly game of horse-shoes. The Rhino objects to this, because more shoes hit him in the face than hit the ham on his nose.

Two miles away, Explorer Alfalfa was having a struggle with a little monkey, and when the monk hit in a hole Leo Lion comes walking along and shoos Al away.

This goes on and on, until at last, a whole crowd of animals have gathered 'round to watch the fun. Then Al runs away. He succeeds in locking the catch in an old building, but they break out and run right over him, he thinks he is rid of them, but the self same lion sneaks up and slaps him in the face, then chases him away.

Aesop Says: "Every man has his price while every woman has her figure."

This document is from the Library of Congress
“Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection,
1912-1977”

Collections Summary:

The Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection, Class L and Class M, consists of forms, abstracts, plot summaries, dialogue and continuity scripts, press kits, publicity and other material, submitted for the purpose of enabling descriptive cataloging for motion picture photoplays registered with the United States Copyright Office under Class L and Class M from 1912-1977.

Class L Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi020004>

Class M Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi021002>

National Audio-Visual Conservation Center
The Library of Congress